Events that occur in unpopulated areas are not considered disasters. Some disasters cause more loss of life than others, and population density affects the death count as well. A flood on an uninhabited island would not count as a disaster, but a flood in a populated area is called a natural disaster.

Then there is loss of property, which affects people's living quarters, transportation, livelihood and means to live. Fields saturated in salt water after tsunamis take years to grow crops again. Personal effects, memorabilia, vehicles, and documents also take a hit.

In 1989, the General Assembly of the United Nations designated the date, October 13th as the International Day for Disaster Reduction “to promote a global culture of risk-awareness and disaster reduction, including prevention and mitigation.” This way, the United Nations aimed to increase the awareness on natural disasters through information campaign in order to promote efforts to increase resilience and responsiveness of communities and governments when facing these adversities.

Read the poem given below and answer the following questions (OTBA) :

THE ROAD NOT TAKEN

Two roads diverged in a yellow wood,
And sorry I could not travel both
And be one traveler, long I stood
And looked down one as far as I could
To where it bent in the undergrowth,

Then took the other, as just as fair,
And having perhaps the better claim,
Because it was grassy and wanted wear,
Though as for that the passing there

Had worn them really about the same,
And both that morning equally lay
In leaves no step had trodden black.
Oh, I kept the first for another day!

Yet knowing how way leads on to way,
I doubted if I should ever come back.
I shall be telling this with a sigh
Somewhere ages and ages hence;
Two roads diverged in a wood, and I-
I took the one less traveled by,
And that has made all the difference.
